Global equities closed Friday 21 August 2026 firmer, though most benchmarks still finished the week lower. The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose about 1 per cent, adding more than 500 points, while the S&P 500 and Nasdaq Composite each gained roughly 0.4 per cent; over the week the Dow fell 0.9 per cent, the S&P 500 1.4 per cent and the Nasdaq 2.1 per cent, snapping three-week winning streaks. The Russell 2000 small-cap index closed at 3,017.87, up 0.85 per cent, outpacing the large-cap benchmarks. Materials led S&P 500 sectors, up 2.1 per cent, with Freeport-McMoRan ahead 7.7 per cent. In Europe the DAX closed 0.59 per cent higher at 26,136.56, the CAC 40 rose 0.37 per cent to 8,484.43 and the FTSE 100 gained 0.64 per cent to 10,816.56, helped by miners. Across Asia the Nikkei 225 slipped 0.30 per cent to 66,016.36, the Hang Seng added 1.21 per cent to 26,009.46, the KOSPI climbed 0.88 per cent to 6,912.95, the Shanghai Composite was little changed at 3,905.20, India's BSE Sensex was flat at 77,540.83 and Singapore's Straits Times Index rose 0.30 per cent to 5,688.96. Brazil's Ibovespa jumped 1.85 per cent to 171,031.73 ahead of a Datafolha election poll. Australia's S&P/ASX 200 eased 0.27 per cent to 9,058.90 and the All Ordinaries fell 0.31 per cent to 9,269.70. The main driver was the bond market: the 10-year US Treasury yield sat near 4.74 per cent and the 30-year near 5.28 per cent after a nearly two-decade high of 5.34 per cent, with the Treasury's expanded buyback plan only briefly calming trade. The dollar index eased to 98.83 and the euro traded near $1.169; gold futures rose 2.2 per cent to about $4,675, on track for the best month since 1999, and bitcoin surged roughly 20 per cent on the week, topping $79,000 before settling near $77,000. Brent was around $94 on stalled efforts to reopen the Strait of Hormuz. The week from Monday 24 August brings the Kansas City Fed's Jackson Hole symposium on 27-29 August, with Fed Chair Kevin Warsh speaking Friday 28 August. July PCE and core PCE, Q2 GDP and durable goods are due Wednesday 26 August, alongside results from Nvidia, Salesforce, CrowdStrike and Veeva; Autodesk, Dollar Tree, Marvell, Ulta Beauty and Workday follow on 27 August, and Intuit, Zoom and Dick's Sporting Goods report 25 August.

Also scheduled are RBA minutes, euro zone Q2 GDP and the German Ifo survey on 25 August, Australian July CPI on 26 August, ECB meeting accounts on 27 August, and Tokyo CPI plus revised University of Michigan sentiment on 28 August.

Most global markets are showing their final prints from the Friday 21 August 2026 sessions, with exchanges closed for the weekend and no live trading until Monday 24 August.

Commodities

Energy led commodity gains again in the week to Friday 21 August 2026. WTI settled near 87.06 USD/Bbl, up 0.26% on the day and about 5.7% on the week, a second straight weekly advance, as Strait of Hormuz tanker flows slowed to an estimated 2.0 million b/d from roughly 4.0 million b/d in July and Washington shifted from military action to sweeping new sanctions on Iran. Diesel crack spreads topped 100 USD/Bbl, a record, on constrained refining capacity. Henry Hub gas was little changed at 2.77 USD/MMBtu after a smaller-than-forecast 16 Bcf storage injection. Base metals firmed, with copper up 1.85% on the day, aluminum 1.92% and zinc 1.99%, though copper ended slightly lower on the week. Precious metals rallied hardest: gold broke above 4,600 USD/oz for a third consecutive weekly gain of roughly 5% and silver held above 69 USD/oz after the US Treasury unexpectedly expanded long-dated bond buybacks, pushing the dollar below 99. MP Materials, used here as a rare earths proxy, closed up 9.10% at 60.05 USD/share after a Morgan Stanley target lift extended a post-Q2 rally. Next week brings US core PCE, Q2 GDP revisions and Fed Chair Kevin Warsh's Jackson Hole speech.

Pure One Corporation topped the ASX board after a run of newsflow from its spun-out Project Venus gas play in Queensland's Surat Basin. The company began drilling at the Venus-2 well in mid-August, released a Venus Project location map to the ASX, and reported strong gas shows at the Venus-2H appraisal well as it advanced toward a planned intersection. Sub-5c energy micro-caps typically move violently on drilling updates, and turnover stayed modest at roughly $0.84 million.

Iron Road was the session's steepest decliner, but no specific company announcement was reported as the cause, consistent with erratic pricing in a one-cent micro-cap where a single tick is a double-digit percentage move. Turnover was only about $22,000. Context matters: the iron ore explorer booked a $96.5 million impairment against its Central Eyre Iron Project earlier in 2026, and the stock has fallen roughly 69 per cent over the past year.

ANAP Holdings led Tokyo as Asian bitcoin-treasury equities rallied hard on a sharp rebound in the bitcoin price. Peer Metaplanet surged more than 20 per cent to a three-month high in the same session, and the move rippled across Japanese crypto-linked names. ANAP, originally a women's and children's fashion retailer, now runs a bitcoin treasury strategy holding roughly 1,100-1,400 BTC, which makes its equity a high-beta proxy for the coin price.

Future Innovation Group fell hardest in Tokyo, but no specific company announcement was reported as the trigger. The decline followed an extended run in the shares, which had climbed to around 1,325 yen in mid-August and were still showing a 12-month total return above 30 per cent, so the session looks like profit-taking rather than a news-driven repricing. Volume was heavy at 9.18 million shares against a small 43 billion yen market capitalisation.

MSM International jumped the most on the SGX, but no specific company announcement was reported as the driver of the move. The catalyst-free spike is consistent with thin trading in a nano-cap: only about 15,200 shares changed hands against a market capitalisation of roughly S$4.7 million, so a handful of orders can reset the price. The flour and food-manufacturing group had earlier undertaken a share consolidation, leaving very few shares on issue.

UltraGreen.ai led Singapore's decliners with no specific reported announcement behind the fall, so the move reads as a sharp unwind in a recently re-rated technology name rather than a news event. Volume was elevated at 1.99 million shares. Note the second-placed loser, Olam Group, is a mechanical move: it traded ex-dividend on 21 August for a 7.0 cent total payout including a special dividend, which accounts for much of that decline.

Hong Kong Top Performers

Source: TradingView Hong Kong market movers, session of Friday 21 August 2026 (HKT). Share volumes as reported by TradingView. Poly Xverse Intelligent Technology (209) screened at roughly -85% but this reflects its 10-into-1 share consolidation adjustment rather than a genuine trading loss, so it is excluded from the losers table.

Xi'an Kingfar Property Services was Hong Kong's standout gainer, but no specific company announcement was reported to explain the surge, so it is best read as a speculative move in a small, illiquid state-linked property manager. The stock has been extremely volatile in 2026, falling around 64 per cent over one 90-day stretch to a June low near HK$1.61, which leaves ample room for violent rebounds on modest turnover of about 1.61 million shares.

Rego Interactive was the largest genuine decliner. The marketing and interactive services group had flagged in mid-August that net profit after tax for the six months to 30 June 2026 would be not less than roughly RMB2.3 million, a modest figure for a stock that had run up more than 200 per cent over the prior year and set a 52-week high in early August. That thin profit guidance, ahead of full interim results due late August, drove the de-rating.

China (Mainland) Top Performers

Source: TradingView Mainland China market movers, close of Friday 21 August 2026. Note the heavy clustering at exactly +20.0% / -10.0%: Shenzhen ChiNext and Shanghai STAR names carry a 20% daily limit while main-board issues are capped at 10%, so many of these prices are limit-up or limit-down rather than free-floating marks. Volumes are exchange share volumes as reported by TradingView.

Ningbo Bohui Chemical closed limit-up at CN¥12.47, up 20.02% on turnover of about CN¥226 million and a 6.74% turnover rate, landing it on the Shenzhen exchange's Dragon-Tiger disclosure list for a top-five 15%-plus daily gain. Chinese brokerage data showed roughly CN¥38 million of net main-force buying, with retail brokerage desks net buyers while institutions were net sellers. The move follows the company's plan to invest CN¥280 million via its Qihang New Materials unit in aromatics oil and hydrogenation refining capacity.

Suzhou Lvkon Transmission was the steepest decliner, down 18.13% to CN¥26.60 from a CN¥32.49 prior close. The context is mechanical rather than fundamental: the commercial-vehicle electric-drive maker only listed on the ChiNext board on 20 August 2026 at an CN¥8.50 issue price, so Friday was its second session, when the newly relaxed price limits allow violent give-back after a first-day spike. No company-specific bad news was reported; this reads as post-IPO unwinding of speculative first-day gains.

GCM Resources led London, jumping 36.55% to 17.0p on 28.5 million shares. The AIM-quoted developer of the Phulbari coal and power project in north-west Bangladesh has been in a sustained re-rating since a Bangladeshi government statement earlier in the week relating to the project; Alliance News reported the shares more than doubling from a 3.90p base to 9.33p on that news, and Friday's advance extended that run. Momentum, not fresh company guidance, drove the latest leg.

eEnergy Group fell 20.00% to 2.00p after a Friday RNS disclosing a new loan facility and an extension of existing borrowings. The AIM-listed energy-as-a-service and solar installer said administrative delays had held up roughly £3.2 million of payments tied to its Mace projects, even though all 65 sites are now fully energised, forcing it to shore up short-term liquidity. It compounds a difficult year in which a new interim CEO already cut full-year revenue and EBITDA guidance.

Azevedo & Travassos led B3 with a +28.11 per cent move to R$8.34 on 1.64 million shares. No specific 21 August 2026 corporate announcement or news report explaining the surge could be located. The most recent verifiable corporate event is a 20-for-1 share consolidation approved in June 2026, which reset the share count without changing capital. Capital Raises & New Listings

Placements, rights issues, secondary offerings and stock exchange IPOs - planned, launched, priced or completed - reported in the past week.

ANZ

Australasian issuance this week was dominated by small caps topping up the tank rather than blue chips raising serious money, with Sports Entertainment Group's A$14.6 million placement the largest deal on the board and the only one tied to a genuine acquisition - the NZ$130 million purchase of MediaWorks. Everything else sat well under A$5 million and leaned heavily on materials and deep tech, with Impact Minerals going renounceable for A$4.1 million on high purity alumina and Sparc Technologies pairing a placement with a share purchase plan to commercialise its graphene coatings additive. The one genuinely new listing, SCX.ai's A$40 million IPO at 30 cents, was the standout for scale and showed that sovereign AI infrastructure can still clear a bookbuild when mining juniors are grinding for a couple of million. A common thread across the smaller raises was the retail sweetener - share purchase plans and free attaching options used to keep existing holders from being diluted out quietly.

01 Sports Entertainment Group closes oversubscribed placement to bankroll MediaWorks deal

The ASX-listed sports media group secured binding commitments for roughly A$14.6 million at A$0.28 per share, of which about A$11.7 million sits within existing placement capacity, to help fund its NZ$130 million acquisition of New Zealand broadcaster MediaWorks, with a non-underwritten retail share purchase plan of up to about A$2 million at the same A$0.28 price, capped at A$30,000 per holder, following for eligible shareholders.

02 Sparc Technologies lines up placement and SPP for graphene additive rollout

The South Australian materials technology company announced a capital raise of up to about A$2.5 million via placement plus a share purchase plan, with a trading halt on 18 August 2026 and settlement of the first placement tranche due 27 August, to accelerate commercialisation of its ecosparc graphene coatings additive and support Sparc Hydrogen.

PER MARKET INDEX

03 Impact Minerals goes to shareholders for A$4.1 million to push its high purity alumina plans along

The Perth-based explorer launched a one-for-four renounceable rights issue priced at A$0.032 per share - a 22 per cent discount to its last close of A$0.041 - partially underwritten to A$1.5 million by Mahe Capital, with two free attaching options for every three new shares and proceeds directed at the Lake Hope High Purity Alumina Project plus its Broken Hill and Lake Irwin ground.

04 Sovereign AI infrastructure play SCX.ai lands on the ASX boards with A$40 million in fresh capital

SCX.ai Holdings began trading on 21 August 2026 under the ticker SCX after completing a A$40 million initial public offering at A$0.30 per share, with the company reporting contracted annual recurring revenue up 21 per cent as demand for domestic AI cloud capacity accelerates.

Asia (Japan/Singapore/Hong Kong/China)

Asia was comfortably the busiest region, and the activity was overwhelmingly a semiconductor and AI capital-raising story centred on mainland China's STAR Market and Hong Kong. The standout was CCSH Corporation, parent of flash-memory maker YMTC, clearing a key hurdle for a 33 billion yuan (about $4.9 billion) Shanghai listing that would rank among the STAR Market's largest ever, following hot on the heels of blockbuster floats by DRAM rival CXMT and robot maker Unitree. Hong Kong provided the other pole of activity, with AI developer MiniMax tapping equity and zero-coupon convertibles for a combined HK$16.04 billion and Shein pushing its long-awaited listing back to a target of 1 September amid cooling investor appetite. The common thread is that Beijing's technological self-reliance push and AI-driven demand are giving chip and AI issuers pricing power that consumer names such as Shein no longer enjoy.

01 YMTC's parent clears the way for a $4.9 billion Shanghai float

The Shanghai Stock Exchange accepted CCSH Corporation's application to list on the STAR Market in an offering targeting 33 billion yuan (about $4.9 billion), with proceeds earmarked for production line upgrades and next-generation NAND research as AI data centre demand tightens memory supply.

PER REUTERS

02 Shein pushes its Hong Kong debut into September

The fast-fashion retailer is now targeting a 1 September listing after slipping from an earlier 28 August plan, with the delay coming as slower growth and rising costs cool investor appetite for the Singapore-based group.

03 AI developer MiniMax raises about $2 billion through combined share and bond sale

The Chinese large language model company sought HK$16.04 billion (roughly $2.05 billion) by issuing 35.6 million new Class A shares at HK$268 alongside HK$6.5 billion of zero-coupon convertible bonds due 2027, with most proceeds directed at AI infrastructure expansion.

US

The US market ran at a typical late-August pace, with a thin but distinctly defence-and-AI flavoured calendar. Lyntris was the week's marquee pricing, raising $297.5 million on the NYSE but only after cutting the deal and pricing below range, then closing about 14 percent underwater on debut - a clear signal that investors are still disciplined on valuation even in a hot sector. Deal sizes elsewhere were modest, with Gravitics setting terms for a $125 million Nasdaq space-infrastructure IPO, ammunition maker First Breach completing a direct listing and a steady drip of new filings including solar developer CoVolt Power and insurer Orion180. The much larger stories are still ahead of the market rather than in it, with Anthropic widely reported to be preparing a filing at a valuation near $2 trillion and UK-based Nscale targeting up to $3 billion in a US listing as soon as September.

01 Defence contractor Lyntris trims its NYSE float and prices under the range

The Falls Church, Virginia company and selling stockholders raised $297.5 million by pricing 17 million shares at $17.50 each, below the marketed range, with the stock then closing roughly 14 percent below its offer price on debut.

PER RENAISSANCE CAPITAL

UK

The UK column is thin this week and skewed toward companies deciding that London is not where they want to price themselves. Nscale is chasing up to about US$3 billion in New York with a September window flagged, and Glencore is openly weighing an Australian secondary listing while it reconsiders whether its primary home still makes sense - both stories are really about valuation frustration rather than growth capital. Against those, the only actual money raised on a UK venue was Vast Resources' roughly GBP 7.8 million placing, subscription and retail offer, a modest sum that funded a reverse takeover into Tajik gold and got the company readmitted to AIM on 19 August.

01 British AI cloud group Nscale targets up to $3 billion in a New York listing

The London-based data centre and GPU cloud company is seeking as much as $3 billion in a US IPO that could take place as soon as September, working with Goldman Sachs and JPMorgan and citing about $51 billion of total contracted revenue.

PER LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE RNS

Europe

Continental Europe was genuinely quiet on new equity issuance in this window, and it would be dishonest to dress it up otherwise. The August holiday lull, combined with the run-up to a widely expected September reopening of the listing window, meant no significant IPO pricings, rights issues or large accelerated bookbuilds could be verified on Euronext, Deutsche Boerse, SIX or the Nordic exchanges during the past week. Euronext's own IPO tracker shows its most recent admissions dating from late July, mostly very small Euronext Growth and Access listings in Milan and Dublin rather than main-market deals. The only Europe-relevant capital markets development of scale actually landed in the United States, where London-headquartered Nscale moved toward a multibillion-dollar New York float, underlining the continent's continuing struggle to retain its largest technology issuers.

01 Euronext listing tracker shows no new admissions since late July

The exchange group's IPO page lists its most recent admissions as small Euronext Growth and Euronext Access debuts in Milan and Dublin dated 27 to 31 July 2026, with no new listings recorded during the week to 22 August.

Rest (South America, Middle East, Africa, India etc)

The rest of the world was carried almost entirely by Dangote, whose refinery locked in about US$1 billion of underwriting ahead of what would rank as Africa's biggest float - and notably kept it retail-focused on the Nigerian Exchange with no foreign listing for now. That decision has already drawn competitive interest, with the Johannesburg Stock Exchange courting Dangote for a secondary listing once the Nigerian debut is done, a reminder that African exchanges are now actively competing for the continent's marquee issuers. The only completed deal was Indian logistics group Shiprocket, which surged on debut after a roughly US$170 million offering, leaving the region as a story of one enormous pending float and one successful mid-sized one.

01 Dangote refinery locks in $1 billion of underwriting before Africa's biggest float

Advisers Marob Strategies and Lilium Capital confirmed a programme comprising a fully funded $600 million tranche for the refinery's completed private placement plus a $400 million commitment supporting the planned IPO, which is targeting about $5 billion and an October listing to fund expansion to 1.4 million barrels per day, with the offer structured around Nigerian retail and African institutional investors and no foreign listing until the refinery has at least three years of results.

PER REUTERS

02 Shiprocket surges on its first day after a $170 million Indian offering
